

Sitting on the threshold between fresh air and mold,
the wind carries the soft song of the tower bells' toll.

The light fades around him,
only to be replaced by another.

She asked if she could stay the night,
he said no.